Introduction

Many Western politicians, commentators and thinkers have begun to discuss the Islamic Caliphate, in many cases describing it as a medieval, backward, seventh-century terrorist state that's establishment would usher in a new era of oppression and tyranny for the world.

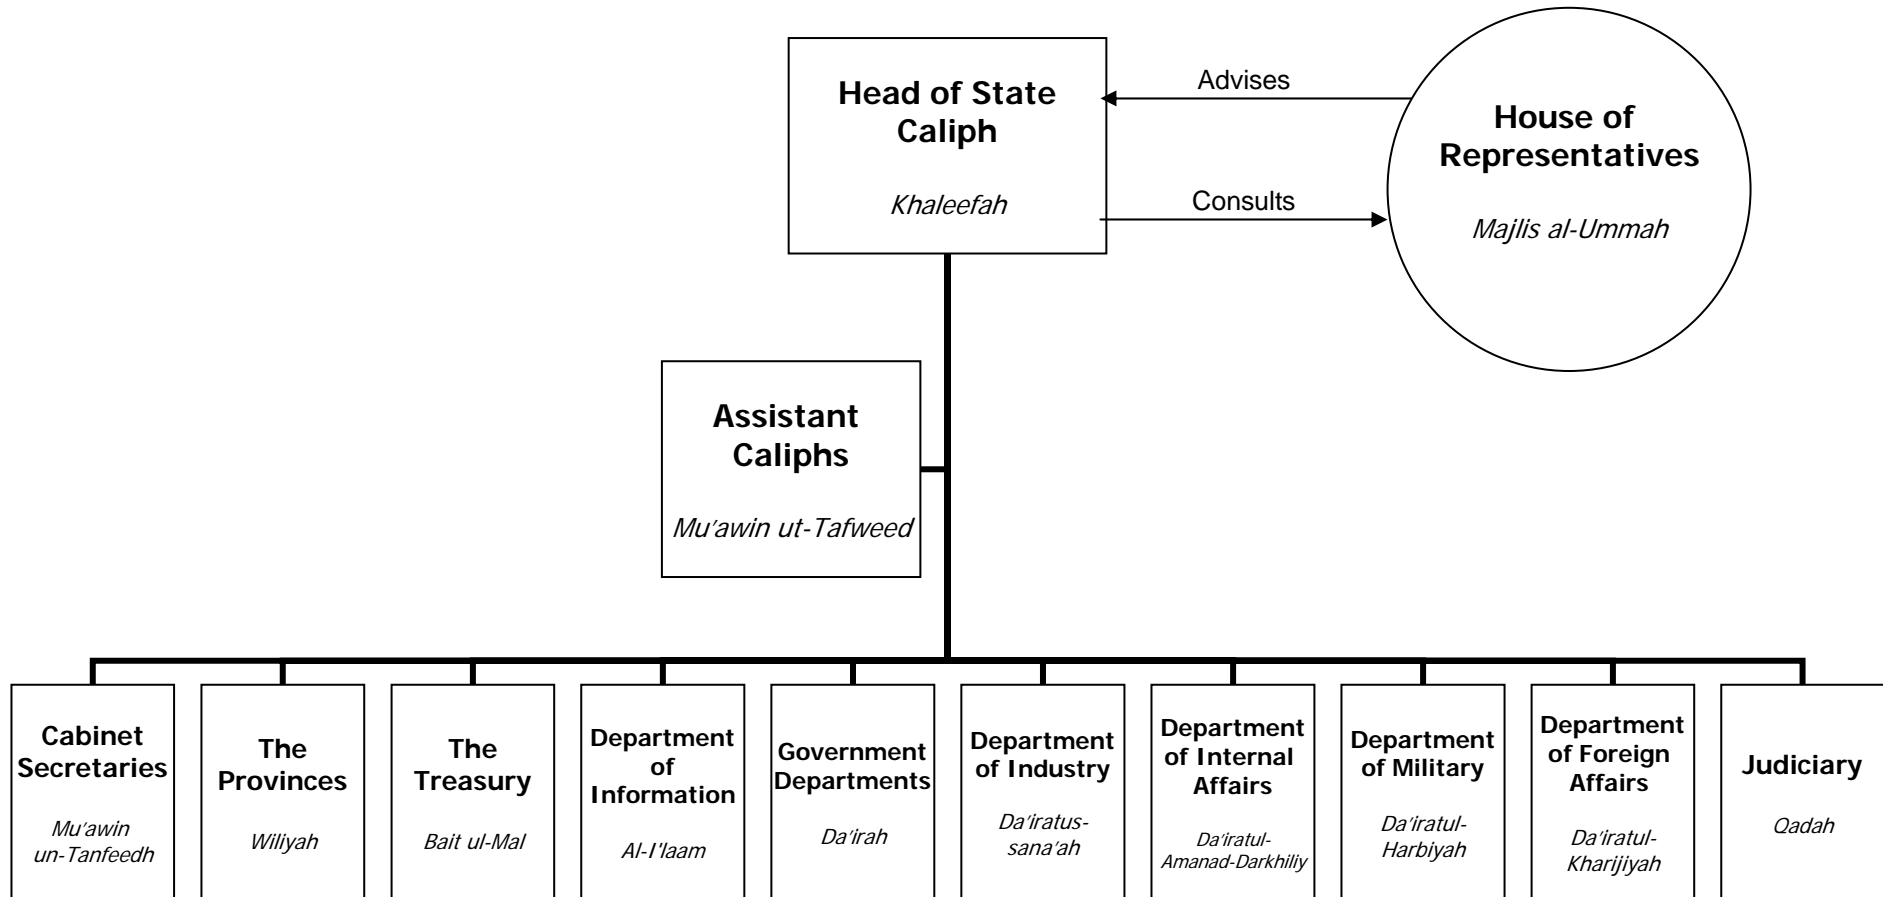

Although these allegations are totally unfounded, the Caliphate has become an easy target for those wishing to plant misconceptions and blatant distortions in people's minds about its institutions and rule.

Muslims believe in Allah the Creator of everything, and His messenger Muhammad (saw) who brought the final message for all peoples. This Islamic message clarified the correct and best way to run the affairs of a society and through what type of ruling structure. It rejected the idea of monarchies, empires and theocracies and established a unique system - the Islamic Caliphate system.

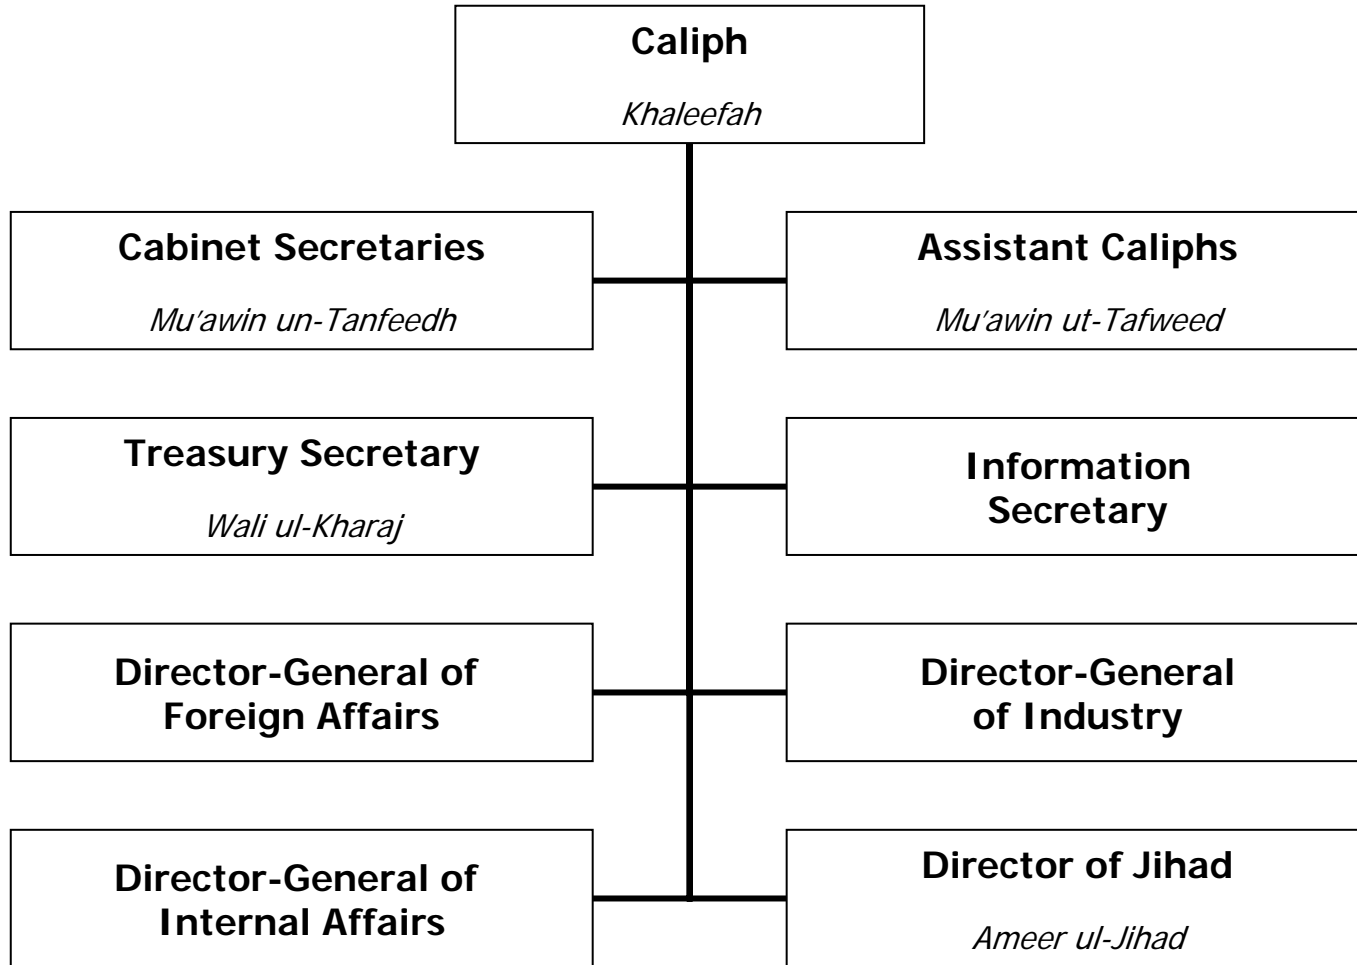

This organisation chart was created to give a simple, graphical overview of the future Caliphate and its structures. It is hoped this will help in dispelling the myth that the Caliphate is just a theoretical dream that cannot exist in the modern age.

Overview of the Caliphate

The Cabinet

Assistant Caliphs

The Assistant Caliphs are the most powerful government posts after that of the Caliph. They have all the mandatory powers of the Caliph in the context of an Assistant and can be assigned to any of the following roles:

- Provisional Leader – In the event of the Caliph's death or in his absence, the Assistant will become the interim leader until the Caliph returns or a new Caliph is elected. The eldest Assistant assumes this position.
- Regional Assistant – The Assistant is assigned to a particular region to supervise and aid the activities of the governor
- Emergency Assistant – After a natural disaster such as an Earthquake, an Assistant will be dispatched to coordinate the relief effort
- Government Assistant – The Assistant can be appointed to any government position such as Chief Justice or Treasury Secretary

Cabinet Secretaries

Military Department

Caliph appoints the following posts:

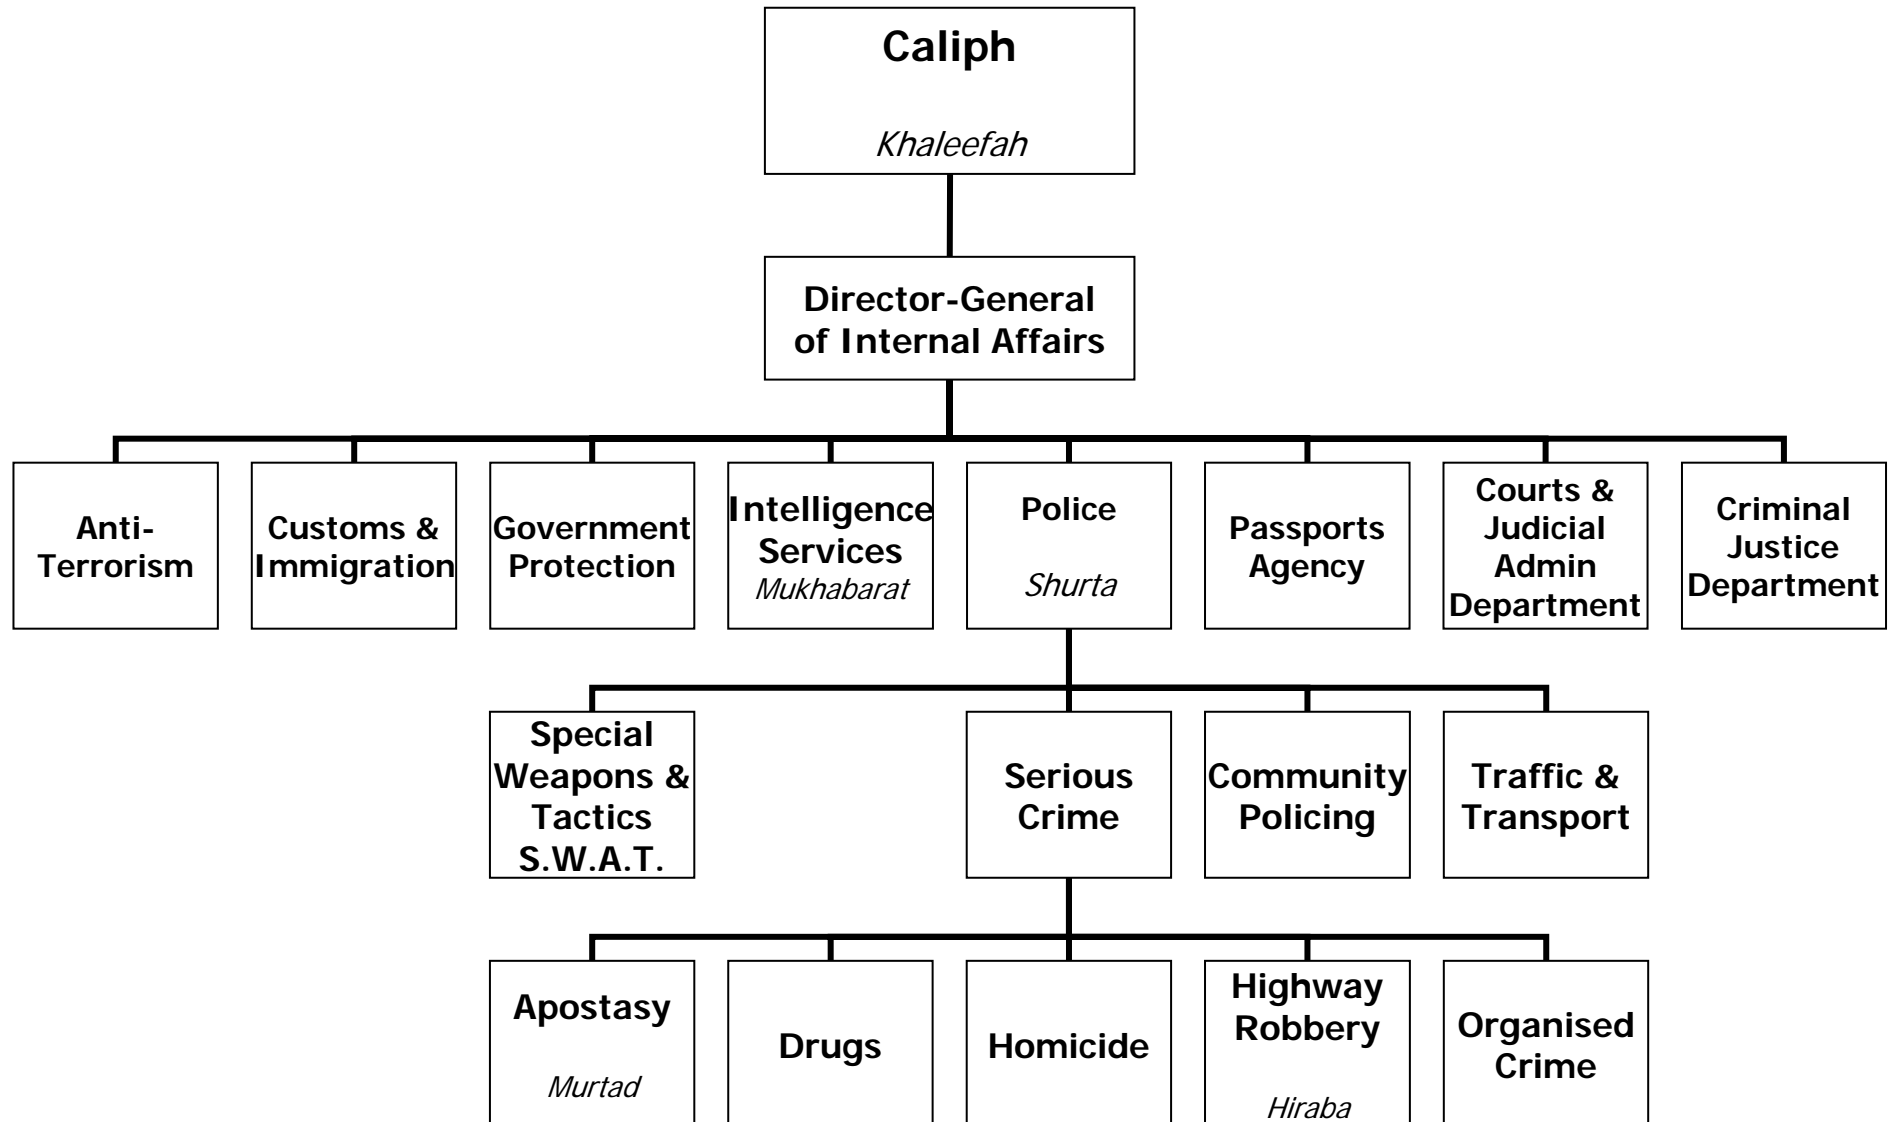

- Director of Jihad
- Corp Commanders (Lieutenant Generals)
- Divisional Commanders (Major Generals)
- Regional Command (General)
- Central Command (General)
- Joint Chiefs of Staff (General)
- Head of Military Intelligence (Lieutenant General)

Foreign Affairs Department

Internal Affairs Department

Industry Department

The Treasury

Treasury: Revenues Division

Treasury: Expenditure Division

Information Department

The Information Department is not an Orwellian Ministry of Information that aims to censor all information in the state.

The Caliphate has a free press within the limits of National Security, individual privacy and decency.

State permission is not required for private media organisations but they must operate within the framework of the law and the limits mentioned above.

Administrative Ruling Units

House of Representatives

A general election is held every 5 years to elect members of the regional assembly who in turn elect members of the House of Representatives.

Caliphate Citizens - Muslims (Sunni, Shia ...); Non-Muslims (Christians, Jews, Hindus ...)

Judiciary

Government Departments

This office contains the heads of all official religions of the dhimmi within the State. These heads administer their own religious affairs.

The Caliphate establishes an administration to facilitate the religious affairs of non-Muslims but allows them autonomy to conduct their religious affairs as they see fit.
